THE COMPANIONATE MIRAGE (Krazy Kat)

Produced by
Charles B. Mintz

Distributed by
Paramount Famous Lasky Corp.

Krazy Kat is walking down the church aisle to the altar with his bride. They are seen leaving the church after the ceremony ducking the rice and old shoes. Krazy Kat leaps for joy, for hurrah! "The Companionate Marriage" - no more responsibility.

After the honeymoon, they return home. Krazy Kat is very happy. He goes into the bedroom and sees one large bed. His wife cuts the bed in two and takes her part into another work. He is dejected.

The next day his wife pleads with him to go to work. Krazy Kat tells her they are married on a 50/50 basis and each must support themselves. At dinner time, he asks for his dinner but she tells him to get it himself as it is a 50/50 proposition. He fast becomes disgusted with the companionate ~~xixxx~~ marriage and yearns for the marriage of old.

One day, the feline follows his wife and finds her coming out of a house with a litter of children and she tells him to meet the family. Next we see, Krazy Kat, on the Reno Express heading for Divorce-land.

THE END.
